The subject-matter of the sole claim is regarded as novel and inventive over the available prior art subject to the wording of the claim being clarified as such:

A leak-proof seal for pulverulent products including:

- a length of felt material (1) approximately 12 mm thick,
- a support arm (2).
- disk springs (3),
- a fixing screw (5), and
- an adjustment screw (5),

whereby:

- the felt material (1) is pressed by the support arm (2) and can be pushed by the disk springs (3) on a steel rotor (4),
- said disk springs (3) being affixed to the felt material (1) and the support arm (2) by way of the fixing screw (5) and the adjustment screw (5) which facilitate regulating and obtaining the appropriate pressure on the rotor (4).

None of the documents cited in the search report - neither alone nor in combination renders obvious such an arrangement which therefore meets the requirements of Article 33(2)(3) PCT.
